WONDERFUL LIGHTNING PLAY.

NOTHING TO EQUAL LAST NIGHT'S SHOW SEEN HERE.

Casualties in Brooklyn in the Afternoon Storm Two Persons Killed and Bozens Shocked-Tents of Sick Children Blown Down-Flagstaff Hit.

The electric batteries of contending clouds opened on one another at 8:45 o'clock last night, and for more than half an hour gave folks who were looking toward the troubled western sky one of the most startling and unusual aerial spectacles ever seen hereabouts. All the most picturesque forms of lightning were visible at times-forked, chain, heat, sheet and what the Weather Bureau terms "shimmering." There were incandescent pulsations, tremulous gleams, sudden floodings of white that embroidered with silver the edges of the clouds, clearly defined for the fraction of a second.

Preceding the finest of the intermittent displays there was always a flushing of whole western heavens. Criss-crossing, darting like rockets or fireworks serpents in all directions, gleaming and twisting like silver eels, bursting into forms leafless and many-twigged bushes. needlelike in slenderness at times and thick as a liner's hawser at others. These are some of the lightning's phases.

Long Island caught the full sweep of the afternoon storm. There the wind was heaviest, the lightning most destructive. Two were killed, dozens of people were shocked, a few seriously; street cars were struck, a church was hit, flagpoles splintered and houses set on fire. The fury of the storm was felt generally over the eastern end of the island. Brooklyn and East New York, as well as the small owns, caught it heavily. Near the sea the wind and lightning were so severe that at Coney Island and Brighton folks were thrown into a panic, believing that a hurricane had hit the shore.

William Hagan, 27 years old, a truckman, of Grand avenue and Dean street. Brooklyn, was struck dead by lightning treaty can be fixed. in the afternoon storm. He was employed by the Brooklyn Alcatraz Asphalt Company. He was driving at Third avenue and Seventh street at 5:30 o'clock when a lightning bolt struck him. He lurched forward and fell headlong to the street. The horses, though inhurt, were thrown by the electric force. Hagan was removed to a store. The ambulance surgeon who was called said he was dead. The bolt struck Hagan's right shoulder and passed out through his right shoe. His waistcoat, shirt and body except at the shoulder.

muel Kaplan, 11 years old, who lived at 312 Osborne street, was killed at Chris-New York, by a bolt of lightning that struck him on the top of the head and passed through his body. He had taken off his shoes preparatory to wading through a puddle of water. The bolt fore up the ground, and when Kaplan was found he was ving face downward in a curious, zigzag ditch. The body was taken to the Bradford street hospital and afterward to the Liberty avenue police station, where it was identified by the boy's mother, who was half crazed from the shock.

At Alabama avenue and Fulton street, Brooklyn, a transfer point for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, a hundred or more persons panic when a ball of fire hit a trolley wire. I'wo women were shocked so severely street hospital. They were Anna Bennett, 17 years old, 125 Sumner avenue, and Mrs. l'cina Rodgers, 20 years old, 22 Church were affected were able to go home.

A crowded trolley car bound for Canarsie, run by Motorman Van Houten, was in Rockaway avenue, near Fulton street, when a ball of fire hit the trolley wire half block ahead of the car, ran along the ire, flashed down the trolley pole and explotled the controllers at each end of the Van Houten, with badly burned hands, was thrown backward into the car. Several women were shocked and two fainted. Police, hospital and fire alarm calls were sent. It took an hour to calm the passengers and reopen traffic.

The storm flooded everything from Rockaway Point to Cedarhurst. At Rockaway Park many of the tents were blown down but no one was hurt. The rainfall was accompanied by a very high tide and the ater reached a point along the beach which had not been touched since last winter. The railroad and trolley tracks on the Far Rockaand only with difficulty were trains and trolley cars run. Women arriving at the stopping points had to be carried from the afternoon storm was felt at the seaside camp for sick children, established at Coney sland by the New York Association for improving the Condition of the Poor. None of the children or nurses was hurt but all got a scare and a pretty rough shaking up.

The camp, ten tents on the beach at Surf avenue and Twenty-eighth street, was full to the limit when the big wind hit it about 5:30 o'clock. All of the forty-five children from 20 months to 12 years old, and the nineteen nurses were inside the tents. In a few seconds every tent was down, children screaming under billows of wet canvas, nurses calling to each other anxiously. It had grown very dark and the gloom added to the unpleasantness. Chilgloom added to the unpleasantness. Children's clothes were caught up by the wind and carried for blocks.

Men rushed from the frame buildings of the association near by and cleared away the fallen canvas and hustled the children into the buildings as quickly as possible. By some curious freak of luck none of the tots had been hit by tent poles, and the same good fortune extended to the nurses. The children were examined, dried and put to bed, none the worse for their experience.

BRITISH MARCH INTO LHASA. Troops Pass Through Streets Before Curious Crowd.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LHASA, Aug. 5 .- Yesterday, for the first ime in history, British troops marched through the streets of Lhasa, the occasion being a ceremonial visit by Col. Younghusband, the Civil Commissioner accompanying the British expedition, to the Chinese Amban.

The troops, when en route to the city, passed at the foot of the Dalai Lama's great palace on Mount Potala, about three miles west of Lhasa, and through the fields to the outskirts of the city. Then they passed through the Chinese quarter, which was swarming with pigs, and entered the city proper.

The Amban's smart guard of honor received Col. Younghusband, who had an hour's interview with the Chinese representative. The Amban lamented the clannish ignorance and low cunning displayed by the Tibetans in their foreign

On his return to the camp, the mission passed the Great Cathedral, or "the Place of the Gods." The streets were filthy. Reports still vary as to the whereabouts of the Dalai Lama and M. Dorjeieff, his Russian adviser.

The people displayed the greatest ouriosity o see the British, swarming in the side streets and climbing on roofs to get a better view. To-day there were 400 Lhasaites outside the camp, and they did an enormous trade selling vegetables, sweets and sugar. The chiefs to-day objected to a proposal that the British occupy the summer palace, alleging that it is the same as a temple. This statement, however, is not believed to be true. The question is in abeyance.

The chiefs promise that the National Assembly will appoint delegates to negotiate with the British, and that their acts will be fully binding upon the Dalai Lama and the people. They say that the Dalai Lama went into seclusion a year ago for three years, fearing disturbances, and that he has now gone on a pilgrimage for the remainder of the period, leaving the seals of office behind so that a binding

CHEFOO, Aug. 11 .- A Russian torpedo boat destroyer which left Port Arthur Wednesday has arrived here and reports that six Russian battleships, four cruisers and a number of torpedo boats got out of Port Arthur Wednesday morn-

Admiral Togo's fleet, it was stated, had started in pursuit of the Russians.

A great battle at sea is expected here. CHEFOO, Aug. 10 .- Admiral Sah, commanding the Chinese fleet, arrived to-day from the Miaotao Islands. He states that the firing heard Monday night was at Port Arthur, and that more firing was heard this afternoon

TORIO, Aug. 10.-The Russian torpedo boats at Port Arthur issue from the harbor daily. They are apparently seeking to make a chance to allow the cruisers inside to make a dash and escape.

It is reported here that the Russians are moving north. The reports indicate that they will withdraw from the Tieling fortress.

KOUROPATKIN IN TIGHT FIX. Russian Staff Hears, However, His Position Isn't Critical.

Special Cable Despatches to TER SUN. From THE SUN Correspondent at St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 10 .- The General Staff is in possession of information beyond that which has been officially published in regard to the position of Gen. Kouropatkin. This shows that while his position is grave it is not critical. The General Staff is encouraged by the activity of the Russian raiders near Gensan, Corea, whence Col. Madritoff is successfully employing chunchuses, or Manchurian bandits, to keep headquarters at Liaoyang informed of the Japanese movements. Gen. Kouropatkin reports to the Czar under date of Monday and yesterday that the enemy's advanced posts on his south front are from seven to nine miles north of Haicheng. There are no particular changes on the east front.

Daily fusiliades take place on the south front between the advanced posts. There is no change on the Saimatse side of Liao-YADE.

The General adds a lengthy account of a Cossack skirmish west of Tsianchan, in which two Cossacks were killed and twelve wounded. The affair showed that the Japanese has field artillery and reserve infantry employed.

Aug. 2. The Russians were taken uanwares and suffered heavy loss of life. They also lost a large stock of supplies and ammunition.

PORTE GIVES IN TO RUSSIA.

Volunteer Fleet to Pass Dardanelles on

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 9 (Delayed)-The result of Sunday's interview between Tewfik Pasha, the Turkish Minister of Foreign Affairs, and M. Zinovieff, the Russian Ambassador, is that the Porte accepts Russia's assurances as to the strictly commercial character of volunteer passing through the Dardanelles, on the understanding that Count Lamsdorff, the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has given these assurances to the Ottomar Ambassador at St. Petersburg on behalf of the Czar.

The Porte last evening sent a note to the Russian Embassy, acknowledging the state-ments made by Count Lamsdorff and Ambassador Zinovieff and embodying the following: The vessels of the Russian volunteer et, of whose passage through the Dardanelles notification has been given, must not carry arms or munitions of war, must fly the commercial flag throughout their voyage, and must pass through the Daranelles separately, at intervals.

COULDN'T FIND SUBMARINE The Shark Under Unfavorable Conditions

Wins a Victory Off Newport. NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 10.-There was an interesting test here this morning of the submarine torpedo boat Shark, attached to the torpedo station, in a contest arranged between her and the gunboat Hist. It was not a day favorable for the submarine, but in spite of this the Shark succeeded in carrying out its mission. The day was clear, but outside, where the attack was held, there was quite a heavy sea running, which made it a diffloult task for the submarine to keep submerged. The Hist was sent of Beaver Tail and told to prepare for an attack. She was in command of Lieut. C. Angland. The officers from the torpedo station were out on the torpedo boat Winslow

As soon as the Hist had taken up her position, watchers were set and every effort made to pick up the submarine.

The Shark, which was using a new periscope, went out in the bay, became submerged and then ran in this condition out through the channel and off to Beaver Tail, picking her way by means of the periscope. She was not seen once by those on board any of the vessels, and the first known of her whereabouts was when she came to the surface near the Hist and signalled that she had fired a torpedo.

The Shark was in command of Lieut.

J. K. HACKETT'S MISSING MONEY Actor-Manager Sent It to the Bank by Jenks and Jenks Got Drunk.

James K. Hackett, the actor-manager sent James Jenks, one of his employees to the Mutual Bank, Broadway and Thirtythird street, yesterday morning to de posit to Hackett's account $150 in cash and nearly $700 in checks.

Late in the afternoon, when Jenks did not return, Hackett got worried. Jenks lives at 127 Lexington avenue, but he hadn't got home, Hackett learned. Then the actor-manager went to the Tenderloin station and asked that he be looked for. Detective Drennan went to the bank and found that Jenks had deposited the checks, but had forgotten to deposit the money. While Drennan was trying to trace Jenks, Policeman Bushnell found a very drunken man hanging on to an iron railing at Madison avenue and Thirty-second street. It was Jenks.

He was barely able to tell his name at the police station. He had $128 in his pockets, and the police guessed that the difference between that and $150 had gone

Hackett sent word that he had no com-plaint to make against him, but the police held him on a charge of intoxication.

LOST FOR SIX DAYS IN THE ADIRONDACK WILDERNESS.

A Party of Indians Finds the Missing Young Brooklynite in an Exhausted Condition -He Had Subsisted for Six Days Solely on Huckleberries and Water.

UTICA, Aug. 10 .- Aaron Frost, Jr., of Brooklyn, who lost his way in the Adirondack wilderness on Thursday night of last week, while on a fishing expedition, was found last night by a party of Indians. The credit for Frost's escape from death by exposure and starvation is due directly to the persistent efforts of the Indians, who, with an Adirondack guide, sooured a wide area of forest, and finally found the young Brooklynite in an exhausted condition, he having subsisted for six days on huckleberries and water. Thursday forenoon young Frost and a companion left their camp near Benson Mines, which is on the Carthage and Adirondack Railroad, and embarking in a skiff set out on Fifth Pond for a fishing trip. Late in the afternoon they landed on the opposite side of the pond, entering the dense woods in quest of small game. They took different routes, agreeing on a code of signals, which were to be exchanged in the event either lost his way. Within half an hour, despite the frequent firing of his rifle, Frost's companion was unable to locate him. Working his way back to Fifth Pond, the companion rowed across and, hurrying to Benson Mines, gave the alarm. Night had fallen and the residents of the own were rather diffident about joining in a search for Frost until it was firmly established that he had lost his way, the impression being that he was playing a oke on his companion and would appear safely in due season. Friday morning, when the young Brooklynite was still mis ing, his disappearance was taken seriously and a party of Indians, who had been tramping through the forest in that vicinity selling trinkets to campers, were approached and a proposition made to them to join in a search for the missing youth, their familiarity with different trails through the forest warranting the hope that if Frost had not fallen into some pond or river he would e speedily found.

The Indians worked in relays, the first party of eleven starting into the woods Friday afternoon at a point near where Frost was last seen by his companion. Night and day the red men, whose efforts were directed by an old Adirondack guide, scoured the forest, beating the underbrush, peering behind logs and looking for foot-

Last night, shortly before midnight, the searchers working between Fifth Pond and Wolf Lake came upon freshly made footprints. Discharging firearms and hallooing, they followed the trail for a mile and a half, when they came upon the object of their search. Seated against a tree they found young Frost, holding a bottle of huckleberries in one hand, while in the other was a bottle of water. His gun lay at his feet. Frost greeted his Indian rescuers with expressions of gratitude, and made known his desire to start for camp, a distance of nine miles. Despite the sufferings which subsistence for six days and nights on a diet of huckleberries and water entailed. Frost appeared in a comparatively good state of health, and kept up with his rescuers as they retraced their steps toward Benson Mines, where they arrived early this morning Frost says he lost his way in the woods fifteen minutes after he left his companion Thursday afternoon. He says that during miles, and subsisted wholly on huckleberries and water. He will return to Brookly within two days after he has recovered from his experience.

made good money. Capt. Soderholm of the fishing schooner Pearl arrived to-day and reported that the richness of the beach gravel had not been exaggerated. It is uncertain how extensive the gold deposits are. The rush, he said, beat anything he had seen in Klondike for fierceness and excitement. This was recognized as a poor man's opportunity.

Champ Clark's Speech of Notification, Declares for the Right of Every Man to Work When He Will-Dynemiting and Deporting Both Unlawful, He Asserts-Urges a Revision of the Tariff, but Recognizes the Difficulty of the Task-Plea for Self-Government for the Filipinos-One Thousand Persons at the Ceremony

Esorus, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Standing on a low platform between two great trees on his lawn, with a drizzle of rain falling upon his unprotected head, Alton Brooks Parker was this afternoon formally notified of his nomination by the Democratic national convention for President of the United States. Around him were a thousand people, the most strangely mixed gathering perhaps that ever attended the notifica-tion ceremony of a Presidential candidate. Admiring neighbors outnumbered the politicians who had come that they might be known as friends of the nominee. William F. Sheehan, the Warwick of the campaign, becured the view of the Judge's barber, while August Belmont, financial helmsman of the campaign, had to peer around the shoulder of the Esopus blacksmith to get a look at the doings.

From the beginning of the proceedings an air of curiosity hung over the crowd, few of whom knew what Judge Parker would say in his speech of acceptance. The rain was merciful when the candidate's turn came, but the drops were still so frequent that the Judge advised his hearers to step under the trees to be out of the wet Few took his advice and most of those with umbrellas lowered them out of compliment to the nominee. His speech was received with marked attention and was punctuated a dozen times by applause. His ideas on the Philippine question were well received. When he referred to man's right to work where he will and pursue any lawful trade or business there were shouts of genuine enthusiasm. The part of the speech that took best with the crowd was the candidate's announcement that he would not accept a second term. The crowd that came from New York on the steamer Sagamore returned with an apparently good impression of the candidate and the day's work. Most of the visitors had a good word for one part or another of Judge Parker's address. Then, too, the boat arrangements were almost perfect and no one hungered or went thirsty. this morning the view from his widnow was not encouraging. The rain came in mount were puddles. But habit could not be overcome, and the Judge trudged down the hill for his swim. After breakfast he read over again his speech and talked with friends of the family about the prospect that the notification ceremony would be

THE FIRST OUT-OF-TOWN ARRIVALS. The first arrivals from out of town were Victor J. Dowling of New York and Mr. and Mrs. George F. Neidlinger, who live on the Astor place near Rosemount. Mrs. of Lehighton. W. P. Hunter of New York Neidlinger brought a great bunch of flowers for the Judge. Next came David B. Hill's private secretary, Mr. Manweller, who carried to Mrs. Parker a box of flowers from Wolfert's Roost and to Judge Parker the news that his chief was on the way. The 12:25 train brought some New Yorkers who had missed the boat, including Bourke Cockran, Corporation Counsel Delany, Frank Goodwin, Judge McMahon, Borough President Cassidy of Queens, and Philip

Cronin, Building Superintendent of Queens. Chicago's delegation arrived at 1 o'clock. It included Frank E. Doling, candidate for Secretary of State; John A. King, Todd Lunsford, Fred W. Harrison, the Mayor's brother, who is candidate for Member of Congress: Fritz Sontag, Frank Wenter, Coroner Traeger, City Treasurer Hummel, Judge Sabbati and John T. Connery. The delegation bore a message from Mayor Harrison expressing his regret that the meat strike kept him at home. NOTIFICATION COMMITTEE ABRIVES

The Sagamore, hearing Champ Clark and the other members of the notification committee, was sighted at 1:05 P. M., and three minutes later she began to sound her whistle in salute. The rain had let up, and Judge Parker gave the order to string the bunting on the veranda and platform. After the Sagamore reached the Rosemount dock the steam yacht Sapphire was descried. She carried John B. McDonald, former Park Commissioner Clausen, Justice Henry A. Gildersleeve and other friends of Mr. McDonald. A third vessel was added to the fleet fifteen minutes later when August Belmont's lightning yacht, the Scout, came up the Hudson. The Scout docked outside the Sagamore, and Senator Patrick Henry McCarren assisted Mr. Belmont ashore. The Sapphire, which was handsomely decorated with halliard flags, lay in the middle of the river and sent its passengers ashore in the launch

The 500 Sagamore guests walked up the hill from the boat two by two, Champ Clark and his notification committee leading the way. The committeemen were glad to hear that Judge Parker had decided to hold the ceremony on land. All were introduced to the nominee by State Chairman Cord Meyer. The committee then took seats facing the platform. Judge Parker's family and personal guests were escorted to the summer house by Mr. Mever DEWET'S PURE WINES AND GRAPE JUICE | and National Chairman Taggart, who then returned to take Judge Parker and Champ Clark to the platform.
